

4.2_Closure

from around the mid-1960s.	From the early 1980s onwards,
By the beginning of the 2020s,	computers began to be used much more widely in healthcare, and their range of uses also increased.
another phase of development in digital technologies in medicine.	Digital technologies began to be used in medicine for administrative and specialist tasks
The relationship between medicine and digital technologies has grown more complex over time,	large amounts of digital data linked to individual patients were being stored routinely.
raising many ethical and practical issues.	The growth of internet connectivity in the 1990s and 2000s contributed to